“These awards celebrate the outstanding contributions of federal, state and local law enforcement to the mission of the United States Attorney’s Office,” said Morrison. The kinds of offenses represented in this body of work involved crimes such as drug homicides and other illegal drug distribution networks, firearms violations, medicaid fraud, public corruption and other misuse of federal funds. There was an international child kidnaping case where two children were returned from Nigeria. There was also a case where $4.4 million dollars was seized from an estate for delinquent taxes. In all, these cases resulted in the successful prosecution of more than 60 individuals.

“It is with grateful appreciation that we publicly recognize these individuals for their exemplary work.” said Morrison.
